Naked women protest against Iraq war

(New York-AP) -- Thirty women stripped naked in Central Park this morning as part of a protest against a war with Iraq. The women stretched out in the snow spelling "No Bush" with their bodies.

The naked protest was during a heavy snowfall and 20 degree temperatures.

After spelling out "No Bush" the women ran back to an overpass, got dressed and had hot coffee and tea.

Then 12 of them sprinted out naked again, this time spelling out the word "war."

The Central Park peace demonstration was organized by Wendy Tremayne, an unemployed Manhattan artist. On her web site, Tremayne urges people to send their stinky socks to the White House.

The women had feared being arrested since it is illegal to bare all in the park, but there were no cops to be seen.

A lone bird watcher spotted the naked group through her binoculars from 60 feet away.
